

Abstract of the Disclosure

A process for producing a glass substrate for a magnetic recording medium by forming a surface roughness in a main surface of a glass plate that has been formed into a disk shape, includes: imparting a processing mark having a permanent strain to the main surface of the glass plate in a circumferential direction thereof; and chemically etching the whole main surface of the glass plate, so as to form the surface roughness.